Martha P. Cotera Presented Mexico's Ohtli Award

Martha P. Cotera, long time community activist and and author was recently awarded Mexico's highwest honor for a civilian, the Ohtli Award.

The Ohtli Award is administered by the Secretariat of Foreign Affairs. It is given once annually by individual consulates and consists of a medallion, silver rosette and a diploma. The name of the award comes from the Nahuatl word which means "road" or "path."

The Ohtli Award recognizes individuals who have aided, empowered or positively affected the lives of Mexican nationals in the United States and other countries.

Dr. Angelsa Valenzuela of The University of Texas at Austin stated that, "Martha exhibits that what must be done if we are to make a positive difference in others' lives and how doing so, equates to a life lived abundantly. Felicidades, Martha! Congratulations! Thank you for being you. The world is a much better place because of you."

Martha Cotera has resided in Austin since the early 1960s and was intergral part of the Chicano Movement. Together with her husban Juan, they went to Crystal City, Texas during the early days of the Raza Unida Party and the founding and development of Colegio Jacinto Treviño in the Rio Grande Valley.

More recently it was Martha Cotera who led the charge in challenging the wisdom of the Chicano and Chicana Studies program at UT in the awarding of a recognition to Texas Land Commissioner George P. Bush.

Matha received her bachelors degree from The University of Texas at El Paso and her masters degree from Juarez-Lincoln University which was part of the Antioch network of study centers based in Yellow Springs, Ohio.

Victor Gonzales Re-Elected Mayor of Pflugerville, Texas

Incumbent Pflugerville Mayor Victor Gonzales took 54% of the vote and has been re-elected to his second term as mayor of this town just north of Austin, Texas on November 5th, 2019. Challenger Brad Marshall secured 46% of the vote, with 3,356 cast for Gonzales and 2,822 for Marshall.

"Our victory was a result of the hard work of my campaign team, never giving up," Gonzales said in the statement. "We never doubted our victory. I am grateful to my team, and wife for standing by my side. Now, back to the drawing board to move Pflugerville forward to bigger and better opportunities"

I grew up in Pflugerville and have lived here, well... for a lifetime. I have watched our "little town" grow from a population of 272 to bustling community of over 64,000.

Being your Mayor for the past three years has been, second only to being Carla's husband and the father of my children, the greatest honor of my life. I am so very fortunate to call you all "pfriend", and look forward to accomplishing amazing things for Pflugerville, with your counsel and help, over the next three years."

Dr. Santiago Zamora Passes Away in Austin, Texas

Dr. Santiago A. Zamora, age 78, was called to our Heavenly Father on Friday, December 27, 2019. He passed away peacefully surrounded by the love of his family. He was preceded in death by his parents, Santiago and Maria Zamora and his sister, Elda Ruffino.

Santiago Armando Zamora grew up in San Antonio. He attended The University of Texas at Austin, received a Pharmacy degree, and began his professional career working as a pharmacist. Shortly thereafter, he decided to pursue his dream of becoming a physician. He moved his family to Guadalajara, Mexico to attend the Universidad Autonoma de Mexico medical school. He eventually settled in Austin to practice medicine as a family practitioner.

He was a pioneer, establishing the first doctor's clinic in east Austin and was the first bilingual Mexican American physician on the east side of town. But, it was not without it's struggles. Initially, banks would not lend him the money to start the business. They said he would never make the business work on the east side.

He didn't take no for an answer and leased property for his clinic in a couple of east Austin locations, including a spot behind a pharmacy on the corner of East 1st and Waller St. He eventually built a clinic on the corner of East First and Robert T. Martinez, where he would stay and practice medicine for over two decades.

Santiago became one of the most prominent Hispanics in Austin, practicing medicine for over 40 years, and served on many boards and community organizations including: Medical Director at Capital City Nursing Home, St. David's Hospital, Board of Director, Staff Doctor at Holy Cross, St. David's, and Seton Hospitals, Southwest Optimist Club Board member, Golden Gloves ring doctor, and Member of the St. Ignatius Knights of Columbus.

James Alderte Named President of Public Policy Center

James Aldrete has assumed the role of board president of the Center for Public Policy Priorities, following a successful two-year term by Veletta Forsythe Lill.

James is the owner of Message Audience Presentation, Inc. (MAP), a political communication company in Austin. MAP's creative and strategic work has been recognized in Campaigns & Elections Magazine, as well as the Wall Street Journal, The Washington Post, and Slate Magazine, among other media outlets.

"I have always admired the credibility and passion of the advocates at CPPP, and I'm honored to help advance this organization's reach and influence across the state," Aldrete said. "We have a dynamic board of directors, representing Texans from different backgrounds, sectors and political parties across the state."

CPPP's board of directors consists of 16 volunteers that support its values which are grounded in equity and justice — and its vision and mission of providing critical leadership in helping make sure Texans all backgrounds are healthy, well-educated and financially secure.

Aldrete received his Masters of Arts in Speech Communication from The University of Texas at Austin

Bienvenidos otra vez a La Voz especially impressed about her is Newspaper. Y cómo dicen todos, how she has helped a number Happy New Year! We made it to causes and groups develop in their 2020. Este año va hacer muv cultural work. One group that interesante. En primer lugar, it will comes to mind is the folkloric mark our 30th year of publishing group in the San Francisco Bay La Voz Newspaper. When I look Area called Los Cenzotles. (Check back, it doesn't seem like it was them out on-line.) that long ago, but it was. I was 38

The second article that deserves your time and attention is the reflection piece on the Julian Castro run for the presidency of the United States. Ponte a pensar por un momento, what kind of courage does it take for a young man to hold himself out there and ask for your support an vote in a race for the White House? While he is no longer a contender in this election year, we should not be to quick to think that this is last we have heard of Julian Castro.

Our next story is a reflection piece on the Raza Unida Party. It was 50 years ago this month that José Angel Gutiérrez and friends launched a political party to counter the traditional Democratic and Republican parties. A number of books have been written on this effort and we find today many people still asking the same question. What is the difference between the major political parties today? We will have Part # 2 in the next issue of La Voz.

On pages 10 and 11, we have a recap on the year 2019. While a number of people keep telling me that newspapers are a thing of the past, I keep saying, as long a people pull down their pants to go to the restroom, there will be newspapers. ¿Por que? Porque people don't just read newspapers. They do other things with them also. Like killing flies, bird cage liners and hiding from someone.

On pages 14 and 15 you will find a list of candidates that will be appearing on the 2020 Travis County ballot on March 3rd. As you will notice there are number of contested races in both parties. Looks like some candidates are smelling blood in the water. Alalva!

Lastly, I want to extend an invitation to anyone who would like to join our distribution team. I am looking for help in getting La Voz into a wider distribution. This is a paid gig.

Gracias,

The story behind the Academy Award's Oscar statuette is itself one fit for the movies.

It starts in the 1920's during the Mexican Revolution. Emilio Fernández was studying in Mexico's military college when he dropped out to take up arms and support the revolutionary cause of Adolfo de la Huerta.

In 1924, a defeated De la Huerta was forced into exile and left Mexico to open a music school in Hollywood; Fernández was captured and sentenced to 20 years in prison. Fernández had been incarcerated for 8 months when he managed to escape. It is said he used dynamite to blow himself out of jail. He soon joined De la Huerta in Los Angeles where he began working as an extra in Hollywood films.

It was in 1928 that friend and fellow Mexican Dolores del Río approached Fernández with the proposition to be the nude model for the Academy Award. Reluctant at first, Fernández took the job and is now forever tied to the Academy Award and its statuette, the "Oscar."

Fernández eventually returned to Mexico where he went on to write, direct, and star in dozens of films, receiving acclaim for several, including "La Perla," which he directed and co-wrote with John Steinbeck, and "María Candelaria," which was the first Mexican film to be screened at the Cannes Film Festival of France.

In Mexico, Emilio Fernández was nicknamed "El Indio," Spanish for "The Indian," a tribute to his Indigenous heritage and subject matter of many of his films. His place in Mexican cinema is well known and highly regarded; however, his place in American cinema history as both an actor and muse for the ultimate Hollywood award should also be as recognized.

As you watch the Academy Awards ceremony, remember the story of how a young man in Mexico went from fighting in a revolution to being the model for the "Oscar," and ultimately becoming and acclaimed star in his own right.

Linda Ronstadt and Earth, Wind & Fire were among the five Honorees who received the 2019 Kennedy Center Honors for lifetime artistic achievements, at the annual event on Dec. 8, 2019, in Washington, D.C., at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. The awards were broadcast Sunday, December 22, 2019, on CBS.

Ronstadt has released over 30 studio albums and 15 compilation or greatest hits albums. She charted 38 US Billboard Hot 100 singles. Twenty-one of those singles reached the top 40, ten reached the top 10, and one reached number one, "You're No Good". Her success did not translate to the UK, with only the single "Blue Bayou" reaching the UK Top 40. Ronstadt's duet with Aaron Neville, "Don't Know Much", peaked at number 2 in December 1989. She has charted 36 albums, ten top-10 albums, and three number 1 albums on the US Billboard Pop Album Chart.

Christopher Loudon, of Jazz Times, wrote in 2004 that Ronstadt is "blessed with arguably the most sterling set of pipes of her generation."

Ronstadt reduced her activity after 2000 when she felt her singing voice deteriorating, releasing her last full-length album in 2004 and performing her last live concert in 2009. She announced her retirement in 2011 and revealed shortly afterwards that she is no longer able to sing as a result of a degenerative condition later determined to be progressive supranuclear palsy. Since then, Ronstadt has continued to make public appearances, going on a number of public speaking tours in the 2010s. She published an autobiography, Simple Dreams: A Musical Memoir, in September 2013. A documentary based on her memoirs, Linda Ronstadt: The Sound of My Voice, was released in 2019.

Academic Farm Workers at The University of Texas at Austin in 2020

What do you call people who work in the agricultural fields and are generally paid and treated poorly? I call them non-union farm workers. What do you call people who work in the fields of political science, sociology, economics and so forth who hold Ph.Ds and are paid poorly compared to others who do the same kind of work? I call them "Academic Farm Workes."

There is a recent report out that discusses what has been going on at The University of Texas at Austin with respect to Mexican American faculty. Below is small excerpt from a piece that appeared in the Daily Texan.

Eight Hispanic professors held a public presentation with three members of the Texas House's Mexican American Legislative Caucus to report on issues of disparity they say they face at the University.

The Independent Equity Committee released a report analyzing representation and compensation for Hispanic professors on Oct. 8. The report found that "various inequities undermine Hispanic faculty at UT."

After the report was released, State Reps. Eddie Rodriguez, D-Austin, Gina Hinojosa, D-Austin, and Art Fierro, D-El Paso, reached out to the committee and asked them to present the findings in a conference room in the Texas Capitol.

Alberto Martinez, history professor and chair of the committee, said Hispanics are underrepresented in the student body and faculty. He said the faculty are underpaid compared to their counterparts with similar job titles and publications. "You can work and swim as hard as you want, but it is a nearly-zero correlation," Martinez said during the presentation. "Whatever salary you get is a process that has to do with random things, such as your tone or how much you wave your hand when you talk."

Dr. Alberto Maldonado

Some University professors were in the crowd of around 30 people, including Victor Sáenz, chair of the Education Leadership and Policy Department. Sáenz said, as one of the six Hispanic department chairs on campus, he has a unique responsibility to ensure the University addresses the inequalities. "I recognize my role to ensure we could hold our leadership accountable," Sáenz said. "We are not only paying attention, but we are also acting upon these inequities for faculty and even for our students."

Julián Castro's campaign suspension is a huge loss for our community

Julián Castro, the only Latino presidential candidate in the 2020 election, announced he is immediately suspending his campaign after falling short of gaining the support he needed ahead of the Iowa caucuses. Known for championing and addressing the issues of marginalized communities, Castro previously served as Secretary of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) under former President Barack Obama and as mayor of San Antonio.

"I'm so proud of the campaign we've run together. We've shared the conversation on so many important issues in this race, stood up for the most vulnerable people, and given a voice to those who are often forgotten," said Castro in a video. "Today it's with a heavy heart and with profound gratitude, that I will suspend my campaign for president. To all who have been inspired by our campaign, especially our young people, keep reaching for your dreams --- and keep fighting for what you believe in. ¡Ganaremos un día!" (We'll win one day.).

Antonio Arellano, interim executive director of Jolt, a Texas Latino voter organization stated, "Words can't adequately describe the huge sense of loss marginalized communities --- the ones we fight for every day at Jolt --- feel today amid Sec. Julián Castro's announcement that he is suspending his campaign. Not only was he running a historic campaign as the only Latino in the Democratic presidential primaries, but he brought to the surface issues that our current administration would rather bury,"

Arellano added, "Castro was a people's candidate, and we the people must continue his fight for fair treatment and representation of marginalized communities, including his fellow Latinos in Texas. If anything, this serves as affirmation that Jolt's work is so critical as we move toward a more progressive society with equal opportunity for all."

"We are saddened to see this bold and fearless Texas fighter step down but we are grateful for his contributions that have allowed other Latinos and Latinas to see themselves reflected in our government, and can now aspire to occupy everything from the governor's mansion all the way to the White House."

Interim Executive Director Antonio Arellano is available for comment. The Start of La Raza Unida Party 50 years Ago

Part #1

Fifty years ago this month, five guys, Jose Angel Gutierrez, Mario Compean, William Velasquez, Ignacio Perez, and Juan Patlan, had the audacity and unmitigated gall to launch an alternative political party in Texas. They were young men, in their twenties, and believed there was no fundamental difference between the Democratic Party and the Republican Party.

As the winds of social change began to blow stronger and the Chicano Movement gained strength in South Texas, there were those who feared that the Mexica American population had finally woken up and that major changes were coming that would result in a new political power dynamic.

Below is a short history of La Raza Unida Party that has been adapted from the many books that have been written on it over the years including the piece by Teresa Paloma Acosta in the Texas State Historical Association journal.

Jose Angel Gutierrez recalls that he and his friends were young men studying at St. Mary's University in San Antonio, Texas in 1967. "All of us were the products of the traditional Mexican American organizations ... All of us were very frustrated at the lack of political efficacy, at the lack of any broad based movement, and at the lack of expertise".

Inspired by the Civil Rights Movement and by leaders like
Martin Luther King Jr and black nationalists like Malcolm X, they reached the conclusion that the actions

being taken by the leaders of the Chicano Movement were not doing enough to get results. They decided that they would halt the current approach being utilized by groups like LULAC and the American G. I. Forum, "which by the 1960s relied on litigation and support from sympathetic Anglos to achieve their goals". So they formed the organization known as MAYO. (Mexican American Youth Organization)

They decided that their new tactics would be much more confrontational, utilizing civil disobedience tactics used in the Civil Rights Movement. They decided to incorporate Saul Alinsky's model of confrontation politics: They protested, picketed, and spread their message through community newspapers like El Deguello, El Azteca, and La Revolucion.

Their tactics earned them criticisms from both white and Mexican American political figures who felt that they were being too abrasive in their tactics. Despite attacks on all sides, MAYO continued to organize protests and school boycotts including the one in Crystal City which started on December 9th, of 1969.

On January 7th, 1970, the school board in Crystal City agreed to settle with the students and their parents and the walkout ended. But 10 days later the leaders of MAYO announced the formation of La Raza Unida Party at a meeting of some three hundred Mexican-Americans in Crystal City, Texas.

In April of 1970, elections for school boards and city positions would take place in many counties in Texas. While these elections were nonpartisan in nature, it was no secret that there were candidates on the ballot who were running under the banner of La Raz Unida Party.

 \mathbf{O} n April 4th, school boad elections in Crystal City, Texas resulted in the election of Jose Angel Gutierrez, Arturo Gonzales and Mike Perez. A few days later on April 7th, 1970, Raza Unida candidates Ventura Gonzalez and Pablo Puente were elected to the city council in Crystal City.

In La Salle County, Alfredo Zamora, under the banner of La Raza Unida Party was elected Mayor of Cotulla. Mexican Americans were elected to the City council while two Raza Unida candidates were elected to the school board. In Dimmit County. Carrizo Springs, Texas, Unida candidates also won spots on the city coucil.

With these electoral victories in South Texas there was a sense among people that yes indeed, the Mexican American had finally woken up. What the Raza Unida Party had pulled off in Crystal City was the talk of the town. And the major media outlets around the state knew they had a story to tell.

The headlines blared across the front pages of the San Antonio Express. (See the cliooings on the facing page.)

But curiously enough, in a number of smaller newspapers in South Texas very little was carried about what had just taken place.

In Uvalde, Texas, 39 miles up the road from Crystal City, not a word was carried in the Uvalde Leader-News about wha the Mexican American community had done in Crystal City. News of the Raza Unida victories came from the San Antonio media outlets or by word of mouth.

Gutierrez and company had shown that acting together and with a purpose in mind, it was possible to bring out political change.

Texas Town Legends is a book written by Olga Muñoz Rodriquez, a former resident of Uvalde, Texas who now resides in San Antonio, Texas. The book is being published by Floricanto Press and Berkeley Press.

Olga was the founder and publisher of a bilingual weekly newspaper, El Uvalde Times which had a brief existence, from November 1977 to March of 1980 and resurrected as a monthly tabloid published from San Antonio from 1991 to 1992 for about fourteen months. The newspaper was dedicated to political issues of the day, events important to the mejicano community of Uvalde, boasting as "the only bilingual newspaper in the Wintergarden area".

It was when the second version existed that the publisher received a request to interview World War II veteran, SSG Guillermo "Willie" De León. Realizing she did not have time to sit with Willie and document his stories, she purchased a tape recorder and some cassette tapes and asked him to talk to the recorder as if she was there with him. Because Willie agreed to do this, sitting alone in his room, we now have the recordings on CDs and the book Texas Town Legends. The CDs will be donated to the El Progreso Memorial Library in Uvalde for everyone to enjoy because it was Willie's gift to us. It is the past existing through his voice in our today and it will be there for future generations to hear.

Part I of the book is based on Willie's stories from his adolescence years in the 1930s when he and his friends were impacted by the Great Depression and then the vision of hope and dignity of President Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal. Working in the Civilian Conservation Corps camps, the young men became aware of the realities that held mejicanos back in their hometown, the inequalities in education, their inability to participate in local government, and the humiliation their ancestors had suffered. When the war started, they realized the CC camps was, to them, a preparation for military service and a prelude to much greater challenges. The young men that left their isolated existence in a small town for military training and later to fight in distant lands in the cold and bitter terrain of Europe were to be "tried by fire". For Willie and his friends, family and life at home became a fading memory as their main concern was to stay alive. Willie's memories of those years are stories of the war about "our mejicano soldiers" now alive in the recordings and now in this book.

Tejano Democrats Hold Endorsement and Screening Convention

A Brief History of the Tejano Democrats

The Tejano Democrats met in Austin, Texas on January 10 and 11 to screen and endorse candidates for the upcoming primary election that will be held on March 3rd. The organization, which was started in 1993, has chapters in a number of cities throughout the state of Texas and is affiliated with Democratic Party.

A little history on Hispanics and Democrats. Before there was Tejano Democrats, there existed an organization called the Mexican American Democrats. This group was formed in 1976, in part as a response to the Raza Unida Party which surfaced in in January of 1970. (See Part # 1 on page 8 of this issue of La Voz)

The Democratic Party believed that Mexican Americans would be moving to the Raza Unida Party if something specific was not offered to them in terms of time, attention and resources. Thus the Mexican American Democrats, led by then Texas State Representative Matt Garcia and Leonel Castillo, among others was formed.

At a MAD convention in June of 1993, in Austin, Texas, at the Raddison Hotel on Cesar Chavez Street (now the Line Hotel) then Texas State Representative Roberto Alonzo who was the chairman of MAD, was at the podium conducting the business of the group and became involved in a parliamentarian dispute on the floor that caused heated debate. So heated was the debate, that the parliamentarian was even ruled out of order when he spoke up to offer an opinion.

Gonzalo Barrientos, then a State Senator from Austin (District 14) was so disgusted with what was taking place on the floor of the MAD convention that he led a walkout of delegates who went into another room and proceeded to hold was is called a "rump convention." In the following weeks they announced themselves as a new organization that would called Tejano Democrats.
